Sample Cups

Nesting Sample Cups

The nesting sample cup is used when smaller sampling is necessary. It is used in conjunction with other test tubes or original blood collection tubes. To use, simply transfer the sample from the original collection tube into the nesting cup. Then, place the nesting cup inside the original collection tube. The nesting cup "rides" along with the originally labeled/barcoded tube in the analyzer. This procedure saves time by eliminating the need to re-label the smaller sample. Ideal for use on direct-tube sampling machines: Dade Dimension®, Hitachi® 747, Kodak Ektachem® 700 Series and more.

Spectrophotometer Cuvettes

Globe Scientific's line of disposable spectrophotometer cuvettes are a cost-effective alternative to expensive quartz cuvettes and are compatible with most spectrophotometers and photometers on the market. The cuvettes are available in polystyrene (for visible wavelengths) and also in UV grade PMMA (for UV visible wavelengths). The cuvettes are engineered for high reproducibility and offer variations within the range of ±1% absorption. This is vital when batch analysis is being undertaken.
